Practical Treatment Strategies for Personality Disorders

Drawing from the fields of Schema Therapy, CBT, Mindfulness, Self-Compassion/Forgiveness, and DBT, this presentation will focus on practical techniques for working with Cluster B personality disorders. A core characteristic of these disorders seems to be deficits in the sense of self: instability, rigidity, or the feeling of being an imposter. Treatment that goes beyond building a toolbox of self-management skills involves cognitive restructuring and building/strengthening a healthy and stable sense of self and helping clients create meaning in their lives. This presentation will look at a multifaceted approach to treatment of personality disorders.

Borderline Personality Disorder (BPD) is a mental illness that typically leads to chaos in the relationships, self-destructive behaviors, and intense emotional pain for the person with BPD. BPD has been called an "emotional intensity disorder" and people with the disorder may experience emotions as if their emotional volume is always turned up full blast.

BPD is characterized by a pervasive pattern of unstable relationships, self-image, emotions and impulse control.

Individuals with BPD may present with a combination of difficulties that often include depression, anxiety, post-traumatic stress disorder symptoms, substance abuse, self-injury, and/or eating disorders. These conditions can manifest themselves through recurring fears of abandonment, angry outbursts, identity disturbances, self-damaging behavior or suicidality, intolerance of being alone and/or chronic feelings of emptiness or boredom.

After working for SLO County Behavioral Health for 11 years Mat Chirman opened Tidelands Counseling in 2010. He has been treating personality disorders in individual and group therapy, using the STEPPS (Systems, Training, Emotional, Predictability, Problem-Solving) model as a framework, for about 12 years. He is a Diplomate of the Academy of Cognitive Therapy.

Community Counseling Center Update

The Community Counseling Center (CCC) of San Luis Obispo County; non-profit 501 (c)(3) is an agency on the move toward growth and transformation. Executive Director, James Statler is concentrated on raising the profile and visibility of the agency through capacity building and increased public relations. The need for affordable clinical services for the uninsured is vast—and CCC is trying to be more proactive in expanding service delivery. A large portion of this work has centered on developing satellite sites to span services across the County. CCC now offers counseling at a downtown office in Paso Robles (811 12th street), at the Link in Atascadero, at the Family Resource Centers in Arroyo Grande, Oceano, and Nipomo., and the Family Resource Center operated by San Luis Coastal Unified School District in Los Osos (formerly Sunnyside Elementary). Commensurate with the growth, CCC recently hired a part-time Clinical Program Manager, Julie Stass, LCSW, Phd to offer additional oversight and clinical leadership. CCC firmly embraces a prevention and early intervention treatment approach and has significantly increased the number of youth and young adults served.

Significant strides have been made to recruit Spanish speaking therapists. CCC now has 3 bilingual therapist serving the city of SLO and South County. One of the agency's most critical needs is a Spanish speaking therapist to serve in the North County. A pair of support groups (Depression Recovery and Anxiety Reduction) are also being offered at CCC in SLO.

Statler would like to remind CAMFT members that CCC provides wonderful opportunities for licensed volunteers to pass their wisdom, skills, and experience to our clients and pre-licensed volunteers while building their private practices. CCC receives many walk-ins and calls from clients that are seeking counseling but do, in fact, have insurance. These are ideal opportunities to make viable referrals to our bank of licensed volunteers in private practice. Referrals, as well as the option to trade-out volunteer time for usage of our counseling spaces are just some of the key incentives that come with joining the agency.

Upcoming Events

Paso Open House: All CCC members and affiliates are invited to attend an open house and mixer to unveil CCC's new office in downtown Paso Robles. The event takes place on Thursday, April 26th from 4:30-7:00pm and will include a ribbon cutting with the Chamber of Commerce, wine tasting with Adelaida Cellars and Hope Family Wines, facility tours, local art exhibitions and plenty of opportunities for networking and resource gathering. The downtown office is located at 811 12th Street, Suite #301. Overlooking the park and offering 2300 square feet, the office affords CCC a promising foothold in North County. Come celebrate this occasion and be a part of the agency milestones being set in Paso Robles.

President's Message

Happy Spring, Everyone!

As I write this, I am happy to announce that we are operating this year with a full board. With the addition of Stacy Schutten Guisse as Vice-President/President Elect and Kim Richards as our new secretary things are humming along. We had a challenging first meeting in our new home on Lawton Ave. As you all know, we rent from the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship. The congregation bought a new church and was in the process of moving in during our meeting in March. However, even with all of the challenges, we had a good turnout to hear Michelle Gaulden, LMFT present on Gestalt Play Therapy. Everything should be up and running for our next presentation in May on Borderline Personality Disorder and I hope even more of you can come out for that topic.

Some of you may have gotten a phone call from one of the board members reminding you to renew your membership. The Central Coast Chapter of CAMFT is one of the smallest chapters, however, we have a lot to offer our members. We are one of the few chapters that have free meetings. It is a chance to meet other therapists for referrals whether you would like to build your practice, your practice is too full, or you may be going on vacation and need to find someone to take a few client while you're gone. The speakers and topics we offer are up-to-date and cutting edge therapies which can be taken from the presentation directly into session. Access to the E-Tree is another perk for members of CCC-CAMFT. It is an e-mail blast which reaches every member who has an e-mail address. It's a great way to advertise upcoming presentations, groups, and workshops or if you have an office you'd like to share or rent that can be shared, as well. And don't forget the local Therapistfinder online. Which reminds me, have you updated your profile lately?

In May, Jennifer Adams, Executive Director of the North County Women's Shelter, shared her passion for the shelter. As an organization, we've pledged to give them support this year and we will be putting out some information on that issue over the e-tree in the next few months. Many of you work with this population and the shelter provides training in Domestic Violence counseling throughout the year for which you can be certified.

I hope you all have wonderful Spring and I hope to see you in May.

*Margaret J. Bullock, MA, LMFT
CCC CAMFT President*

Membership Report

Dear Members,

I would like to thank all of you who have renewed these past few weeks. We really APPRECIATE you and value your membership.

We have been wondering how to stay connected with you all and continue to provide value for you in these difficult economic times. It seems that no matter how technologically advanced we get, there is nothing like a phone call and a few words about our common interests and beliefs. Our Board and several other members have been doing out-reach to people and you have responded -- nothing like a voice with a person behind it!

I still would like to encourage all of you who have not renewed to think about the benefits of membership and how this organization keeps us connected with others in our field, something that can really inspire and hold us during difficult times.

We are working to build community and local support. Our e-tree emails keep us updated and connected; our Find a Therapist for local referrals is a wonderful tool; we offer the newsletter online as a “green” alternative; our offerings for education and cross-training keep us informed and alive in our practice; and we offer CEUs at reasonable prices for quality presentations, often featuring local talent!

If you enjoy being a member, tell a friend or a professional contact person. We need a diverse group of people to stay strong: LMFT, LCSW, PhD, or other affiliates; we even love organizations—ask if yours will join as a member and benefit from the opportunities we offer.

Please call me with questions or comments at 805.703.3193 or email me at istern@thearttherapycenter.com.

Crisis Intervention is NOT psychotherapy; rather, it is a specialized acute emergency mental health intervention which requires specialized training. Thus, crisis intervention is sometimes called “emotional first aid.” This program is designed to teach participants the fundamentals of individual crisis intervention.

This course offers “life skills” which can be applied by everyone on a daily basis, such as parents dealing with family stress or you helping a friend cope with grief after the loss of a loved one. It is designed for anyone who desires to increase their knowledge of individual (one-on-one) crisis intervention techniques for their own personal use, or for use in the fields of Crisis Intervention, Disaster Response, Education, Emergency Services, Business & Industry, Employee Assistance, Healthcare, Homeland Security, Mental Health, Military, Spiritual Care, and Traumatic Stress. It is an important foundational course for anyone who serves in the field of disaster response, emergency services, law enforcement or basic crisis assistance ministry (e.g. pastoral ministry, counseling, etc.).

Program Highlights:

- ◇ Psychological crisis and psychological crisis intervention
- ◇ Resistance, resiliency, recovery continuum
- ◇ Critical incident stress management
- ◇ Evidence-based practice
- ◇ Basic crisis communication techniques
- ◇ Common psychological and behavioral crisis reactions
- ◇ SAFER-Revised model
- ◇ Suicide intervention
- ◇ Risks of “harm” caused by incorrect treatment or advice

We are extremely privileged to have Dr Mickey Stonier from San Diego to instruct this course. Mickey has a PhD in Marriage and Family Studies and is a member of the San Diego County Critical Incident Stress Management Team. He is a Certified Trainer for the International Critical Incident Stress Foundation (ICISF) and has facilitated many Critical Incident Stress Management Debriefings throughout Southern California. Mickey is a Certified Emergency Services Specialist with ICISF, a Certified Trauma Responder and Certified Trauma Services Specialist with the Association of Traumatic Stress Specialists (ATSS). In addition, he serves the State of California Office of Emergency Services in its efforts to develop a statewide standard for crisis chaplaincy certification. He also lectures for the American Red Cross Spiritual Care Training and International Critical Incident Stress Foundation. He serves as a Chaplain for the San Diego Fire-Rescue Department, San Diego Medical Examiner's Office, San Diego Harbor Police Department, Office of Emergency Services as well as Chaplain for the Spiritual Care Response Team as a member of the National Critical Response Team.

March Program Review:

Not Just an Empty Chair

According to Violet Oaklander, a long-time practitioner of Gestalt Play Therapy, "As a child becomes more aware of her functioning in the therapy experience—who she is, what she feels, what she wants, what she does, and how she does it—she becomes aware and integrated. She has more choice for emotional expression, getting her needs met and for exploring new behaviors. This awareness happens through the various experiences and experiments that the therapist provides in the process of play therapy." Clay, drawing, sand tray, games and puppets are used frequently in Gestalt therapy with the goal of assisting the child to gain the ability to sustain contact.

According to presenter Michelle Gaulden, the primary way to engage a child in making contact is through the senses: sight, smell, taste and touch. When a child has difficulty making and maintaining contact, it is usually her defense against difficulty, scary and overwhelming feelings and emotions.

"Contact interruptions" take various forms such as: desensitization—disconnecting from one's own emotions; confluence—demonstrating clingy, helpless, sometimes regressive behaviors; introjection—being overly pleasing, accepting other's feelings as her own; retroreflection—when she holds back expressing thoughts and feelings; projection—placing one's own feelings on another person; deflection—ignoring or turning away from thoughts, feelings and emotions. Some of these contact interruptions can be positive in certain situations.

Watching Violet Oaklander in action working with a client as she uses clay to demonstrate projective techniques was inspiring. After watching the video and discussing our observations, Michelle led us in a Gestalt drawing exercise, asking us to imagine an image, give form to our image, describe it, become it and own it. We then shared our reflections on this Gestalt drawing experience which most participants appeared to find personally meaningful and useful as a technique to use with clients.
